DETAILS:

[REDACTED]

MI 92-364

On September 6, 1972, MI T-2 advised that in August, 1972, subject attended the funeral of JOHN ALIOTO, former boss of the Milwaukee LCN and father-in-law of FRANK BALISTRERI.

On February 12, 1973, MI T-1 advised that to his knowledge, subject is currently criminally inactive.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

1Date of transcription 2/13/73

VITO AIELLO was interviewed by Bureau Agents, who identified themselves as such, at his home, 3038 North Maryland Avenue, Milwaukee, and provided the following information:

AIELLO stated that he had been sick with the flu for the past three days and had not gone to work, however, he normally works at the Eagles Club, 24th and Wisconsin, from 3:00 p.m. to closing, where he is the head bartender.

When questioned concerning the gangland style killing of LOUIE FAZIO, AIELLO stated that he has heard various rumors concerning the reason for the killing. AIELLO stated that he, personally, does not believe that robbery was the motive because if that were the reason, the assailant would not have to kill the victim. AIELLO stated that he hears many rumors concerning the slaying because of his occupation as a bartender. Included in these has been a rumor that the murder was by Chicago hoodlums. He stated that he doesn't know if this is true or not.

AIELLO further stated that he had known FAZIO all of his life and considered him to be a "good guy".

VICTOR AIELLO, also known as VITO AIELLO, 3038 North Maryland Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, furnished the following information to Special Agent (SA) [redacted] in AIELLO's 1969 Cadillac at curb side on Maryland Avenue several blocks south of AIELLO's home:

AIELLO was queried concerning any information he might have about the murder of AUGGIE MANIACI. AIELLO stated that he did know the MANIACIs and was a friend of the family. However, he had no information whatsoever concerning MANIACI's death.

AIELLO was asked what the possible reason was for MANIACI's murder to which he responded possibly as a result of not having paid a gambling debt to "those people". AIELLO was further asked to clarify who he meant by "those people"; however, he only would answer "you know the people I'm talking about".

During the interview of AIELLO, he frequently interjected by saying that he was not "involved" and had nothing to do with the Italian hoodlum element in Milwaukee. He said that he knows almost all of the Italian individuals in Milwaukee whom the Bureau considers to be criminally involved; however, he said he knows these people on a social basis and is not involved in any of their business or personal activities.

It was visibly noticeable by SA [redacted] that when SA [redacted] would make positive statements concerning certain Italian individuals implying that they were involved in criminal activities, AIELLO would nod in apparent agreement. Nevertheless, when asked about his possible knowledge of any criminal activities, especially concerning the murder of AUGGIE MANIACI, he would vehemently deny having any knowledge or involvement.

After approximately 35 minutes, the interview was terminated and SA [REDACTED] left AIELLO's car at which time AIELLO drove off to his work at the Eagle's Athletic Club on Wisconsin Avenue.

SUBJECT: VITO AIELLO

OO: Milwaukee

Re memo of writer dated 2/3/77.

Subsequent to interviewing subject on 5/13/77, concerning the MANIACI murder. [REDACTED]

b7D

[REDACTED] However, it was apparent that although he, AIELLO, was somewhat cordial toward the writer, he was, nevertheless, reluctant to discuss any matter of substance relating to the Milwaukee hoodlum element, particularly the La Cosa Nostra (LCN) and/or their associates.

Additionally, no attempts were made to obtain a photograph of the subject because of his very limited movements and difficulty of maintaining a surveillance in the neighborhood where he resides.

In view of the above, it is recommended no further investigation be conducted and this case be placed in a closed status.
